

Rainy Day BMDWCA System Update

Good afternoon, all,

This note is to remind you all to please continue to conserve water as much as you possibly can. During the worst of the summertime water woes, the community pulled together and got us through a tough time. We need to continue that diligence moving forward. Even though we are getting rain and have had a little resurgence in the tanks, the water levels are still critically low in the wells, so we cannot become complacent. Improving the efficiency and production of the system is an ongoing task, and conservation is a huge part of that right now. Thank you in advance for your help.
